On Best Behavior

Omaha.

The only thing that pleased me more than Nebraska's win over Penn State was the conduct of the fans in the southeast section of Memorial Stadium. Their standing applause for Joe Paterno and his Nittany Lions as they left the field after the game was a credit to all Nebraska fans.

I hope this becomes a tradition after all home games — win or lose. Class is not based on a win-loss record but on how you conduct yourself and how you treat your guests. Our team does a great job and deserves first-class fans.

Haunted House Vandalized

Omaha.

Since we have signed our lease, we have been out to the March of Dimes Haunted House every night securing the building. It is broken into every night. It amazes me that people can be so destructive. They stole a $350 casket that was used for a prop.

The police have been as cooperative as possible; however, they can't be there constantly. Security is our largest expense for this project, so we can afford 24-hour guards only while the house is open Oct. 18-31.

When the guilty are caught, we shall have no choice but to prosecute. It is bad enough to vandalize and steal, but to deliberately steal from a charitable organization is very discouraging. I wonder if those doing this think about all the children with birth defects.
